BLAINE CAN NAME THE MAN. No Longer a Candidate, He May Be a Republican Warwick-Republicans All at Sea-Booms Growing Meanwhile.

(From the New York Star, May 31.)

Not in many months has so much discussion been excited among the politicians of both parties as was provoked by the ever sets at rest the question of the Maine publication in the Star yesterday of the statesman's ambitions with respect to the second and final letter of declination from Mr. Blaine. In most quarters it is accepted as conclusive, and as leaving no room for the slightest encouragement to hope that anything that can happen in the near future would influence Mr. Blaine to change his mind and face the trials and disappointments of another presidential campaign. A near relative of Mr. Blaine was seen hy a Star reporter yesterday, but he insisted on the suppression of his name. He said: "Mr. Blaine does not want to undertake another campaign He is doing all he can to prevent his name being used and he is doing it concientiously, and with a persistence that he hopes will result in an agreement on some other name. He has written a great many letters like this one to Mr. Reid to other confidential friends and they all have this object in view. He hopes it will be successful and that he will be spared such another trial as he had in the last campaign. But, if everything fails and the nomination is given to him unanimous ly, I still think he would accept and make as gallant a fight as he could. He is a Republican of the Republicans. His declina-tion then would ring the death knell of the President Richard A. Cunningham of the New Amsterdam Club had carefully studied the letter and thought that it meant Mr. Blaide's peremptory withdrawal from politics. "He is out now for good, and that's the only construction to be placed on his letter," said Mr. Cunningham. "If it is true, look out for a circus at the Republican National Convention. There will be a big fight for an empty honor, for that's what it would amount to. Still nobody knows but Blaine would jump in at the Colonel Michael C. Murphy was not a little surprised and was at a loss to diagnose the R-publican situation. "If Blaine is really out," said he, "it complicates matters very much for the G. O. P. Many Republicans took Mr. Blaine's first letter as a bid for the nomination, and of course the Blaine men went to work with a will. Now they don't know just what this means or just exactly what to do. I guess they'd peet take him at his word. Senator Erwin, at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, wouldn't say much. "If I were to write a letter like that, my friends would know how to interpret it. It's a good letter and will give the boys a pile of work. I Senator Warner Miller, who had such a time of it at Buffulo to be delegated to the National Convention, didn't like to talk. He thought, being a delegate, it might be immodest or compromising, but he didn't see how anybody who knew James G. Blaine could put more than one construction on that letter. "In fact, it was altogether a work of supererogation for him to write it," said the Senator, "for we all knew what he meant by the first letter. It means that he is out and we must look for another man.

"And that other man-?" "Ah, there now; you really don't mean that, do you?" said the handsome Senator, smiling and moving away. "See me at "The great regret for Blaine's withdrawal, and that he has withdrawn let no-body mistake." said Mr. Robert P. Porter, sident of the American Protective Tariff League, "is that no other Republican could draw on the Democrats for votes as he could. The Irish element were strong friends of Mr. Blaine and I think many of them will deeply regret his preventing them casting their votes for him. "Ch, there's lots of them. Don't think that Mr. Blaine is the whole Republican party, though he was one of its pillars and won't cease to be."

General Nehsmiah M. Curtis, the department commander of the G. A. R. of New York State, who came to town to see and participate in the parade, said that up in Ogdensburg the letter made a decided sen-sation. The confirmation of the news wa not unexpected, but the question on every lip was "Who now?" The General wouldn't undertake to say on whom Blaine's mantle would fall, but he did say that Chauncey M. Depew was highly thought of all

"Allison is the man for the West," said John S. Clarkson, of Ghio, "and when it comes to Chicago some folks will be surprised at his strength. The Republicans who say they didn't believe Mr. Blaine's first letter are only those who didn't want to. I knew him well enough to know that he had studied every word, and that no power could drag him into another cam-paign. The friends of Senator Allison acted on the good faith of that letter, and that's why they have gathered strength for him so early in the West."

[N. Y, Star, May 30.] The following letter from Mr. Blaine to Whitelaw Reid, the editor of the Tribune, was received in this city yesterday. It forpresidential nomination. He will not accept a nomination in any event, and may be regarded as out of the field of practical politics henceforth.

PARIS, May 17, '88. Whitelaw Reid, Esq:
My DEAR SIR—Since my return to Paris from Southern Italy on the 8th inst. I have learned (what I did not before believe that my name may yet be presented to the National Convention as a candidate for the presidentional nomination of the Republican party. A single phrase of my letter of January 25 from Florence (which was de-cisive of everything I had the personal power to decide) has been treated by many of my most valued friends as not absolutely conclusive in ultimate and possible contin gencies. On the other hand, friends equally devoted and disinterested have construed my letter (as it should be construed) to be an unconditional withholding of my name from the National Convention. They have in consequence given their support to emi-nent gentlemen who are candidates for the Chicago nomination-some of whom would not, I am sure, have consented to assume that position if I had desired to represent the party in the presidential contest of 1888.

If I should now, by speech or by silence, by commission of omission, permit my name, in any event, to come before the Convention, I should incur the reproach of being uncandid with those who have always been candid with me. I speak, therefore, because I am not willing to remain in a doubtful attitude. I am not willing to their suffrages and their confidence. I am not willing that even one of my faithful supporters in the past should think me capable of paltering in a double sense with my words. Assuming that the presidential nomination could by any possible chance be offered to me, I could not accept it without leaving in the minds of thousands of these men the impression that I had not been free from indirection, and therefore I could not accept it at all. The misrepresentations of malice have no weight, but the just displeasure of friends I could not patienly en-

Republican victory, the prospects of which grow brighter every day, can be im-periled only by lack of unity in council or by acrimenious contest over men. The issue of protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, for it concerns the prosperity of the present and of generations yet to come. Were it possible for every voter of the Republic to see for himelf the condition and recompense of labor in Europe, the party of free trade in the United States would not receive the support of one wage-worker between the two oceans. It may not be directly in our power as philanthropists to elevate the European laborer, but it will be a lasting stigma upon our statesmanship if we permit the American laborer to be forced down to the European level. And in the end the rewards of labor everywhere will be advanced if we steadily refuse to lower the standard at home.

Yours very sincerely,

POPE LEO FRIENDLY TO IRELAND. The Bescript Was Issued in the Hope of Aid ing Her Cause.

DUBLIN, Ireland, May 31.-Nothing since the promulgation of the Papal rescript has given so much satisfaction and done so much to solidify the Nationalists as the resolution adopted yesterday by the Conference of Archbishops and Bishops of Ireland. The resolutions rusted and every decent man Ku-Klux- record that their understanding of the re script is that it was "intended to affect the domain of morals alone and in no way to interfere with politics in this country They recite that unequivocal assurances have been received from fhe Pope of his interest in the temporal welfare of the country, and that it was his hope by the rescipt to remove those things that might prove obstacles to ultimate success. The resolutions conclude by deprecating hasty or irreverent language with reference to the Pontiff or the sacred congregations, and reminding their flocks that the Pontiff "has an inalienable and divine right to speak with authority on all questions appertain-ing to faith and morals The promulgation of those resolutions is a timely act and one which will bind again the wavering hearts-of Catholics to the authority of the Church of Rome. The act was a necessary one also, for doubtless Rome was in danger of losing, to a great degree, her influence upon Irishmen espe-cially, and in extension, the power she has always exercised over the various members of the Catholic world, who saw a Papal decree calmly discussed and made the subject of protests. The new turn of affairs is disappointing to the Tories, who see their political capital vanishing and their recent efforts to re duce Irelan to obedience made futile. The protests of the Irish to the rescript, too, have een a lesson to the Pope, who is having it forcibly brought to him that modern pon tiffs have not the same power as those of

The Pope now concedes the judgment of the Irish in the political domain." United Ireland publishes the resolutions, with favorable comments, and says that neartfelt satisfaction in Dublin will result from the action of the bishops. It is believed that the plan of campaign will now be modified and possibly abandoned altogether. A hundred farmers of Kerry, encouraged by the Papal decree, have begun to buy surf from the bog at Ahabeg, belonging to
